SEWAGE PURIFICATION

with minimum attention.

At a Country House with modern sanitary appliances, six times the quantity of sewage and waste water has to be dealt with than in the days when cesspools were generally installed.

Cesspools with their manifold objections are intolerable: modern sanitation calls for something better; considerations of health demand a Purification Scheme which shall produce an effluent comparable to rainwater in appearance, free from smell, safe to deliver to any ditch, without causing the slightest nuisance.

The cost is from £55, completely installed for a bungalow or cottage and pro rata.

We have just published a book on the subject, and full information is given as to what a cesspool is and what it CANNOT do, which will be sent free on application to anyone resident in the British Isles.

When you write, please ask for booklet 5 N.

WHAT is the result? Friction is automatically abolished. Mowing becomes a pleasure instead of a drudgery. The mechanism is enclosed and runs continuously in an oil bath. Ball-bearings in back axle drive and rotary cutter stop all shaking and clattering. The machine moves almost without an effort, whilst single hand-wheel adjustments dispense with spanners and ensure mathematical accuracy of alignment.

Keep your House as clean, pure and healthy as the open fields

Dust is a menace to the household—a breeding ground for germs and a spoiler of furniture, clothing and fine fabrics. There are three types of—

ATTRACTIVE FROCKS FOR YOUNG LADIES

Many ladies experience the greatest difficulty in finding really attractive and well cut clothes for their children. If in despair they decide to have them made specially to order they find that their children's clothes are just as expensive as their own, and moreover in adapting a grown up model the effect is often absolutely spoilt. The Manageress of our Juvenile Department has made a lifelong study of this difficult problem, and has produced an infinite variety of clothes for children and young ladies on practical lines, in perfect taste, excellently cut from high grade materials at moderate prices.

FROCK, for young ladies, in good quality navy serge, the bodice and skirt are prettily trimmed fine tucks, collar and cuffs of fawn stockinette stitched red to match, buttons down the front and on pocket. For 14 to 18 years.

THE WEYBEARDS HERD

PEDIGREE JERSEY CATTLE

The Property of J. H. N. ROBERTS, Weybeards Farm, Harefield, Middlesex STATION DENHAM. 25 MINUTES FROM PADDINGTON.

MASTERMAN'S GOLDEN CIDONIA

This Cow was born June 18th, 1920, and now at 3 years, 8 months, 1 week, 5 days old has produced two calves and 948lbs. of butter. Is now giving over 1lb. of butter a day, and due to calve again on May 26th.

In the English Jersey Cattle Society's Register of Merit for Milk and Butter production there are three grades of Certificates, the highest Class A is of a high standard, and difficult to attain.

For the year 1923, the Weybeards Herd had more Cows in Class A than any other herd. In fact, there were only 23 Cows in the British Isles that attained this standard, and six of them (including the one illustrated above), were in the Weybeards Herd.

To illustrate how well the Weybeards Herd lives up to its motto "Type and Production," all these Cows have obtained some prize or commendation, in Inspection Classes at the principal shows, including 1st at the R.A.S.E. Show.

Staples Way is Nature's Way

NATURE made the first mattress—Mother Earth; she taught men and women how to sleep perfectly straight, and Staples copied her. But Staples added those deep, cushiony, spiral springs, so beautifully gentle and yielding to every movement of the body. Those terribly unhygienic, sagging woven-wire mattresses of the Victorian Ages are daily being scrapped—and this on doctors' definite recommendations. Straight rest is healthy—inducing sleep. Crooked rest is unhealthy—result sleeplessness and many of those silly little ills from which so many men and women suffer.

THE 11 H.P. STANDARD LIGHT CAR

THERE has been a Standard light car from the earliest days of the light car movement. Originally of 9.5 h.p., with side-by-side valves, the design has undergone many changes, some of which have taken the car out of the official light car class—i.e., cars of which the total engine capacity does not exceed 1,500 c.c.; but to-day there are two Standard models, both of which have evolved from the earliest of the light cars, one upwards and the other downwards. But in case this upwards and downwards description should savour of comparison of merit, which it is in no sense intended to suggest, perhaps I had better say that from the original Standard light cars two models have evolved, both being bigger engined than the original, but one being smaller and one larger than the first, that marked an entire departure from the lines of the original 9.5 h.p. It was in the later years of the war, when the Canley factory was devoted to the manufacture of aeroplanes, that Coventry was startled one fine morning to see a car that was obviously a Standard but which was much larger and much livelier than the 9.5 h.p. long known to all good citizens of the motor city as a car of more than usual life, in whatever sense the term might be interpreted.

For some years this 11.6 h.p. was the only car sold under the Standard banner, but it has now given way to a larger and a smaller edition. It is with the smaller that we are now concerned. It was described in these pages shortly after its introduction, and though no drastic changes have been made in its design, I have no hesitation in describing the current model as the most improved car of which I have had any experience. No more striking example could be found of how little things count. It is not that the original 11.4 h.p. was bad—far from it; but this revised version is so much better that it comes into quite a different class. And withal, its price is considerably lower, so that, besides demonstrating how little things can improve a car, this new Standard also shows in the most convincing possible manner that motor car values are improving. If memory serves aright, the sparking plugs of the earliest versions of this model were on the off side of the engine and they were so deeply recessed into the cylinder block as to be really inaccessible. They are now on the near side and are very easily get-at-able, and this marks the only important external difference between the two power units. In itself the change would make no difference whatever to the performance of the car, of course; but the 11.4 h.p. of 1924 would leave standing its predecessor of a year ago.

Another change is to be found in the relation of wheel-base and track, for the respective figures are now 8ft. 9ins. and 4ft. 6ins., dimensions that give the car an over-all appearance entirely different from what has been the Standard characteristic—and, in my opinion, the Standard failing—in the past. Instead of looking high, unsightly and distinctly unfashionable, the four-seater 11.4 h.p. is now ultra-modern, for it is certainly one of the very lowest built cars on the road; and this change is one of supreme importance, quite apart from the question of appearance, for it has had a most desirable effect on the road behaviour of the car. This 11.4 h.p. is easily one of the fastest cornering light cars in existence, next to the special racing productions which signify nothing in ordinary touring matters and practice. But this is rather anticipatory, and we will revert to the usual and more logical sequence of things.

THE CHASSIS.

Rated at 11.4 h.p., the four cylinders of the engine have a bore and stroke of 68mm. by 90mm., giving a total capacity of 1,307 c.c., so that the power unit is distinctly on the small side for its rating. In external appearance it is somewhat unusual in that the overhead valves are exposed—there is no kind of cover, as is all but universal practice when this valve arrangement is adopted, and lubrication of the rocker arm operating gear is by means of a cup which must be filled with oil periodically. The careful owner supplying the mixture through an exposed induction pipe, while bridging this is the exhaust manifold, from which the exhaust pipe is brought out at the centre. So far, everything is quite accessible and neatly disposed, and the only thing calling for comment is the quite extraordinary drumming of the fuel tank when it contained just about two gallons of fuel and the car was doing just 30 m.p.h.; under any other conditions it was unnoticeable. I have never before experienced such marked lines of division between conditions that caused drumming and those which did not, nor have I previously been able to indicate quite so definitely just exactly what conditions were necessary to set up or to stop it.

At the front end of the engine is the belt-driven dynamo, and the next time I am in Coventry I am not going away until I have been to the Standard works and watched a man put the belt in position. It must be possible, because it is there for everyone to see, and it works most convincingly. But how it gets there, and will fill it every day that he uses the car, but mostly it will, doubtless, go unfilled, and it is at least possible that this neglect, coupled with the exposure of the operating mechanism, will mean premature wear. On the other hand, there are indications that the point is not so serious as it sounds, for one cannot imagine that a firm like the Standard Company would continue a practice that had proved unsatisfactory during a long period of public use. Therefore, this valve arrangement, which is not new to Standard cars, may be accepted as one of those things that might be better but is entirely satisfactory as it is.

Lubrication is by splash from troughs into which dip the big ends and which are kept supplied with oil from the sump into which dips the enclosed flywheel. Cooling is by thermo-syphon circulated water, there being no fan. Ignition is by magneto on the near side of the engine, while on the other side is the carburettor, fed by gravity from a tank in the dash and what happens if an owner who is not also a prize contortionist should have it break, belong to the innermost mysteries of motordom. The electric equipment is by Lucas, which is adequate guarantee of its quality, and the head lamps of the car tried provided a most interesting object lesson in focussing and in the fallacy of the belief that perfectly focussed head lamps are the ideal illuminants for night driving.

HEAD LAMPS AND THEIR FOCUSING.

These lamps were the best focussed and had the most powerful beam of any that I have seen, but they were not the best for driving by. The beam from each, originally arranged to meet nowhere, I adjusted to meet some hundred and fifty yards in front of the car (a hundred and fifty estimated and not measured yards, that is), and their illumination of objects that they there rested upon was astonishing. But the trouble was that they barely lit up anything else, and one cannot drive a car by a point over a hundred yards away. The remedy would, of course, be the very simple one of refocussing the lamps, and I dwell on the point not in a spirit of fault-finding, but as a matter of instructive interest. To one who has always hankered after perfectly focussed lamps and who complains volubly because so very few lamps are well enough made to allow of perfect focussing, the experience was most illuminating.

There is another feature about the electrical equipment that calls for comment. This is that the starter is mounted, not close up to the engine, as is usual, but on a chassis cross member, and the drive is taken from it to the flywheel through a flexible joint and a shaft about a foot and a half in length. It is a novel lay-out, having the merit of making the starter very accessible (after the floor boards of the body have been raised), but it hardly strikes one as being too strong for its job, and my impression of potential weakness was confirmed when the starter jammed on three separate occasions. It is a detail that, in spite of its assets, needs modification, for seized starter pinions are always annoying and may be something much worse.

TRANSMISSION.

A disc clutch transmits the power through a three-speed gear-box to the characteristic Standard underslung worm-driven rear axle, and the whole system is as silent as a light car transmission system can be. Both hand and foot brakes are internal expanding in the rear wheel drums, and this seems a suitable opportunity for paying the Standard a very high compliment. This car has three highly important superlatives among cars coming between the £200 and £300 marks. It has the best foot-brake, the best clutch and the best steering of any. In none of these details is the apparent design exceptional, and the effect must be obtained only by supreme care and attention to detail; but whatever the method, there is no questioning the result. The hand-brake is thoroughly efficient and adequately powerful, but does not stand out so prominently among others as does the foot-brake, and also the clutch, for extreme lightness and sweetness in action. The suspension by semi-elliptic springs all round (the detachable wheels are for 70mm. by 90mm. tyres) is another strong asset of the car, for its roadability, both as regards road-holding and comfort, is of a very high order.

BODYWORK.

Standard bodywork used to be uncomfortable and, in my opinion, grossly so far on this side as he used to be on the other, but both body sides and back rests are now too low to give adequate support to the driver and passengers above their waist lines; indeed, they always were too low in this respect, but the former evil of too high over-all build for the body has, fortunately, quite disappeared. The wind screen on the four-seater model is pleasantly nearer the back of the seat, though there seems room for further improvement in the same direction, for the Standard has a door of such generous width that a little could surely be spared from it to confer still increased protection from the wind screen. The detail finish of the bodywork is not elaborate, but is as good as may reasonably be expected, in view of the very low price of the car, for at £235 this Standard is among the two or three very lowest priced cars, with approximately similar specifications, on the market, and it certainly comes well above the majority in the matter of its road performance. One cannot have it all ways, and most people will prefer to have a really good road car rather than one embellished with numerous gadgets and high-class finish for their money.

True, there are one or two details of the bodywork that seem unnecessarily flimsy. Thus, the compartment at the back of the rear seat in which are stowed the side curtains when not in use is sealed by a small strip of leather and a turn-button. This strip came off in my hands with its two retaining tin-tacks the first time I opened the rear squab of the seat. The strongest detail about the body is the bonnet springs, and these are unnecessarily strong. They make opening and closing of the bonnet almost an undertaking, and seem quite out of keeping with the very light handle and general build of the bonnet.

The Standard people were, as is well known, the pioneers of the now universal all-weather equipment for touring cars, and, though practically every maker has followed their lead, no light car can yet approach the Standard in the matter of side curtain excellence. They are very simple—two for each side—they open with the doors, they are easily erected once their standards have been given gentle attention with a hammer, and they are both rigid and efficient in use.

four-seater model all four curtains may be erected along the sides of the car without use of the hood. A sloping wind screen gives a very pleasant finish to the appearance of the body and also improves its weather-tightness, but suffers from the defect of being mounted upside down—i.e., the larger panel is at the top, so that if it has to be opened in bad weather there is a much bigger gap through which rain may beat than there would be were the larger panel at the bottom with the much smaller one above it.

ON THE ROAD.

There are many attractive points about the road behaviour of this Standard, but by comparison with other cars of its size and class the most prominent is doubtless its silence; but for the occasional drumming of the fuel tank already referred to, and the speedometer, there is barely a sound at reasonable touring speeds. The speedometer is of what is now the rather rare type, without a trip recorder, but it is a Smith instrument, and its noise is quite exceptional, for most speedometers of this make are as quiet as such things can be. In view of the size of the engine and of the complete car, it is quite a fast traveller, as 11.4's go. The brand new sample tried could do its 47 m.p.h., and one hears that when run in these cars are capable of well over 50 m.p.h., with 30 m.p.h. readily attainable on second gear. Up to about 35 m.p.h. one does not appear to be calling on the engine, and at all speeds below 43 m.p.h. its running is as smooth and as easy as one could desire.

Hill climbing is a very strong feature, for both on top gear and on second the capabilities of the car are well above the ordinary. We—the car and I—went on a tour of exploration and discovery in Sussex, and the hills we found were such as to surprise the most hardened of Sussex-dwelling motorists and motor cars. Round Heathfield and Mayfield there are ideal testing hills, not the freakish kind that vie with the Porlocks and Lynton, but the more normal and, in a way, more satisfying severe main road hills of considerable length and adequate gradient, so that, whereas one would feel disappointed at having to use the lowest of the ratios of a three-speed box, one nevertheless feels very pleased at doing without it, and at surmounting on second a hill that looks as though it will surely call for first.

The controllability of the car has already been touched upon. By virtue of the excellence of the brakes and steering, and of the suspension and track-wheel-base ratio that gives such good road-holding, it is of a very high order. It is not difficult to decide why this car is so popular among ladies, large numbers of whom may be seen at the wheel of 11.4 h.p. Standards wherever you go. The bodywork may not be remarkably comfortable—it certainly is not—but the unsightly, mainly as the result of the high build of the car. This defect has been so drastically eliminated from the current 11.4 h.p. that I am not at all sure that the designer has not erred slightly on the side of the other extreme. Nothing like

In striking contrast to the last car I tried, the Standard with its side curtains erected is absolutely free from draughts, and is most cosy. The two rear curtains may be used as a rear wind screen, on either two or four seater models, or on the efficient all-weather equipment, together with an engine that is more than satisfactory and a chassis that is easily controlled, form a combination that, to the driver who wants ease of transit, is hard to beat. The line of improvements that the makers are now following is the right line for bringing this car into the position that it really deserves and in the past has only just missed. Carried to its logical end, it will see this car in a supreme position in its particular market, which, by the rounding off of the few corners that remain, will be enormously extended. Even now an output of one thousand cars a month from the Canley works does not satisfy the demand, and if and when the evolutionary and improving process is complete, this pleasant failure to satisfy will be even more marked. Brooklands in 1924.

THE track at Weybridge is just opened after its usual period of winter overhaul and repair, which this year have been much more extensive than for some time. It is claimed that the track is now in better condition than it has been since the war and already rumours of the possibility of remarkable speeds for the coming racing season are to be heard, among them being one to the effect that the eight cylinder Leyland, with its designer, Mr. Thomas, at the wheel, may be expected to lap at 120 m.p.h., the highest speed for which the track is designed. Whether the promise of such a wonderful performance materialises or not, there is no doubt that in motor racing 1924 will be a red-letter year, for more and more manufacturers are coming to realise the value of racing experience, and the same recognition is in a different way spreading among the motoring public. The man who may take little interest in the relative performances of cars in public competitive events is, nevertheless, beginning to see that the racing car of to-day is the touring car of to-morrow, and that it is no fanciful belief that the firm who makes the best and most successful racing car may be expected to turn out a touring vehicle of exceptional merit even though there may be little superficial resemblance between the racing and the touring productions.

From the public standpoint Brooklands Track has, in the past, suffered from two handicaps which have undoubtedly done much to militate against its popularity. The first is the difficulty of ingress and egress on the days of big meetings and the second is the poor quality of the catering. The segregation of the entering cars, before they reach the track, into lines according to the entrance they intend to use—to the paddock or to the public enclosures—has done much to improve the entrance question; though, doubtless, the new gateway to the paddock from the main road, which will admit only one car at a time, will do something towards countering the benefit of the other arrangement. It would be interesting to learn the motive for this new, doubtless quite expensive, but really very silly gate. The catering for the coming season, which opens with the first public meeting on Easter Monday, is to be mainly in the hands of the Club, and patrons will have at least the satisfaction of knowing that however it is done it cannot be worse than it has been in the past, while the name of the Army and Navy Stores as the actual providers seems to promise something very much better.

'Buses and Trams.

QUITE apart from its sufficiently obvious and, to some sections of the populace, decidedly unpleasant aspects, the recent 'bus and tram strike had its lessons of considerable import which are likely to interest motorists more intimately than those who are not directly interested in the development and growth of road transport. It transpired in some of the numerous discussions that preceded the strike, or that took place during its continuance, that the prosperity, nay, indeed, the very existence, of tram services was made possible in many cases only by the withdrawal of 'bus competition by agreement between the authorities or companies concerned. Wherever a 'bus service was instituted along an existing tram route the trams became unjustifiable as commercial enterprises. They could not hope to compete on level terms with the 'bus, and only when they had a monopoly of public transport service could they show a working profit. In some parts of the provinces the tram services have been, and in some cases still are, profit-earning, but in every such case it will be found that they have not had to encounter the competition of a more flexible method of transport. In Birmingham, where the institution of regular and considerable 'bus services is a comparatively recent development, those services are restricted from picking up passengers on a tram route.

When any system needs such bolstering to justify its continued existence and, moreover, when it is given such artificial encouragement, there is surely something wrong. It denotes an effort on the part of ultimately impotent powers or authorities to go against a first law of scientific, as of natural, development—the survival of the fittest. Once upon a time, when the roads were used but little for the traffic of everyday affairs, trams were an excellent innovation and a most useful contribution to the amenities of civilisation. But the coming of mechanically propelled vehicles that can use the whole road and not a mere track laid on and obstructing part of it has changed all this. To-day the tram is obsolescent, for its inflexibility—i.e., its restriction to definitely located tracks—and its obstructive nature to a much greater traffic are no longer insuperable limitations. The very thing that has made the tram an economically unsound and a practically inconvenient blot upon our streets has provided a remedy in the form of a better and more convenient method of transport.

A 'bus service may be instituted without any special preparation of the roads over which it is to run, and should, for any reason, the continuance of a service on any particular route become undesirable it may be taken off without necessitating a complete reconstruction and closure of the roadway. In the services already referred to, which were maintained on a profit-earning basis solely because the 'bus company was prevailed upon not to run in competition, the circumstances were entirely changed by the coming of 'buses run by private enterprise that could not be suborned. When the "combine" 'buses were removed to allow the trams to make a profit, the "pirate" 'buses took their place and again reduced the running of the tramway to the level of a commercial and economic failure.

Flexible and readily controllable transport that does not necessitate the dropping and picking up of passengers in the middle of a crowded highway, so obstructing the passage of all other traffic, is an essential of future development, and the sooner the trams begin to disappear from our highways the less will be the financial and other losses that their sponsors will have to withstand. In speed and in convenience the tram has now met more than its match, and attempts to bolster it up and to develop it by the institution of new routes are foredoomed to failure. This fact is openly recognised in some districts, where tram lines are being expensively pulled up because they have ceased to serve any useful purpose, but at the same time we have the spectacle of vested interests attempting to expand a tramway system in some of the most impossible places, where a recognition of its failure is bound to come even sooner than it may elsewhere. The Ludgate Circus case will occur readily to mind—trams laid down in such a centre could not possibly be continued for more than six to ten years unless all other forms of road transport were prohibited by law. And such prohibition would, in the long run, be no more effective than the old red flag regulation for mechanically propelled vehicles or the current 20 m.p.h. speed limit.

Improving the Amenities of the Road.

IT is not often that action concerning road users on the part of official bodies in the county of Surrey are calculated to meet with the approval of private car users. All the warmer welcome should, therefore, be extended to such desirable efforts as may materialise. One of these very rare things has just happened in the form of a decision by the County Council to make punishable by fine the practice of flying balloons and streamers and such-like implements of torture from charrs-à-bancs in a manner likely to cause danger to traffic.

The nuisance and, sometimes, the serious danger of these evidences of undue hilarity on the part of motor-coach occupants are horrors that most of us have experienced, and if the neighbouring county of Hampshire would provide this outlet for the superfluous energies of its conscientious police, to be followed in due course by Sussex, then the lot of the London motorist on the road this summer would be much happier than it has been in the past. It is to be noted that the ban on the practice is not limited in its scope to semi-public vehicles, and it is to be hoped that the police anxiety to concentrate on the private car does not still further blind them to the evil-doings of other vehicles or their occupants so that the regulation will, in effect, become a dead letter. Occasionally one sees balloons being carried in a private car with children passengers, but, so far, we have never seen nor heard of danger or even inconvenience being caused by this practice. It is the big vehicle in which a number of comparative strangers are gathered together for a "joy ride" that constitutes the real danger, for seldom is there in the vehicle anyone who can exercise authority or control over all the occupants.

THE BIAS AGAINST THE MOTORIST.

This very important aspect of the behaviour of the provincial police in their displaying much more attention to the private car owner than to other users of the road, reminds one of a very significant fact in the Criminal Procedure Bill on which we commented at some length quite recently. In this Bill the only dangerous driving mentioned is that of the motorist, and no suggestion is made of an increase of penalties for drivers of vehicles other than mechanically propelled who may be found guilty of similar offences. The average man finds it difficult to understand why the horse driver, the cyclist or even the pedestrian should not be subject to really deterrent penalties for being drunk on the highway. The dangerous driver of a horse-drawn vehicle may be every bit as serious a menace as one of a motor car. Certainly the pedestrian may be excused from penalties for dangerous driving, but how many accidents have been caused and how many more most narrowly averted by the efforts of a vehicle driver to avoid the drunkard on the highway? It is not so very long ago that we saw a fatality avoided by the narrowest of margins owing to a motorist's (successful) effort to avoid a drunken pedestrian, but a Surrey policeman to whom the incident was reported a few minutes later, when the pedestrian was still straggling all over the roadway barely a quarter of a mile away, refused to take any action.

WOOL CANVAS COATS EMBROIDERED IN GAY COLOURS—THAT HIGH NECK EFFECT

EVERY day, almost, there is a dress show of some sort or other to attend, and one comes away from all overwhelmed by the skill of the modern couturière in achieving so many different effects under such singularly limited auspices.

At Thresher's, Conduit Street, where a dress display was held the other day, the presiding genius evoked much praise and admiration by some novel half-length coats, made of a sort of cream, wool canvas, embroidered over in a design like old woolwork. These are quite the most original expression of the fashionable gay coat advanced this season, and though more or less on quasi sports lines, are likely to be seen in all manner of unexpected places and surroundings.

All the dresses shown appealed as extraordinarily wearable. They were of the moment without any exaggeration or straining after effect. I was much struck, too, by some rest gowns that had simple skirts of Georgette, soft, full and filmy, surmounted by easy cross-over cape-bodices of fancy brocade, embossed velvet and the like rich fabrics. These struck quite a new note. And there were several most original long day coats. One, a notable success, being of black face cloth, which, below a long waist line, was cut up into strips to form a fringe and show a white-ground cloth plaided over in red, blue and black, a similar treatment occurring in the collar and cuffs.

The tailor-mades, as behoves a house which has long been famed for them, were excellent; as were a number of attractive sports suits. An amusing item of the afternoon's programme was a parade of riding habits, dating from the mid-Victorian age to the present ride astride.

In every direction the expressive scarf craze seems to grow in favour. It is to be seen on sports suits, ordinary tailor-mades, jerseys, afternoon frocks and evening toilettes; sometimes as a thing apart in the matter of colour, again forming an integral part of the garment. A wide scarf of fuchsia mauve and red in wide alternate stripes formed the pièce de résistance of a mauve evening gown. This was attached to one hip and then allowed to flow, so that it could be flung around the shoulders, over one arm, or be held out like a floating cloud behind. Then there are fling-over scarves arranged to accord with a small piquant chapeau, sets that impart a particularly arresting touch to the quiet little jumper suits or jumper tailleurs as they are called.

Much of the dressing at the early spring race meetings invariably provides food for reflection. At Cheltenham, the other week, an impression was conveyed that the high neck is coming in. A smart suit of russet brown tweed, checked over in a paler tone and black, was made with a quite sacque coat, caught at the throat, beneath a turned-down collar of the material, by a Latin Quartier cravat of brown crêpe de Chine. Another in a mousy grey brown, checked and over-checked in cinnamon and deep orange, had a similar coat, with a narrow scarf collar, one end threaded through the other and falling at the back. Save for the ends, this might have been an ordinary small stand-up collar. Anyway, that was the appearance suggested at the back.

You get something of the impression conveyed, in a slightly more pronounced form, in our sketch of the week. A black and white striped material is used for the skirt, the stripes arranged so that the black is uppermost, the white only showing as the pleats are disturbed, with which is worn what can only be described as a glorified jumper, of black silk stockinette, the small silver buttons closing the high collar being repeated in extended formation at the base of the jumper.

There are, considering the claims made for extreme slimness, quite a number of kilted skirts being shown, and I notice how many are mounted on a deep yoke piece, so that the long upper part may fit closely and smoothly. Quite the cleverest diversity in pleating is the crystal. This is so fine as to be almost invisible, but it is there all right, as tennis players will find when they require to take a long stride. But in repose a crystal pleated jupe is as slim as the most ardent follower of La Mode could desire. And there is, furthermore, claimed for this innovation that it does not come out, and in crêpe de Chine it has every promise of proving one of the leading sports crazes of the season. L. M. M.

THE NEW "CORSLO"

The CORRECT GARMENT FOR WEARING WITH RIDING HABITS

To achieve the most fashionable figure effect of absolutely natural suppleness is the aim of the new "Corslo." Only two central and short bones are introduced into the cleverly cut crepe de Chine, Tricot or Satin, and it does the combined duty of bodice, corset and hip belt, moulding and at the same time supporting the bust, and giving a long, graceful line to the waist and hips, and kept in position by two sets of suspenders. First and foremost the "Corslo" is for the slender woman's wear with the most fashionable day and evening gowns and dance dresses, and, as absolute freedom for every movement is essential for the enjoyment of tennis and golf, etc., it is a necessity and boon to the sportswoman; incidentally it should be included in every Trousseau and Tropical Outfit.

THE NEW "CORSLO" HIP BELT AND BUST BODICE COMBINED (as sketch), in pink or white cotton tricot, buttoned at back, two bones in front, which may be removed for washing; two pairs of suspenders. Measurements required when ordering: hip, bust and waist.

In crepe de Chine ... 3 Gns.
In super quality Silk Tricot 4 1/2 Gns.

OF INTEREST AT THE MOMENT

THE GRAND NATIONAL CUP 1924.

THE importance which the general public concedes more readily, perhaps, to the Grand National than to any event of the racing year adds interest to the picture which we reproduce of this year's Cup, made by Messrs. Elkington and Co., Ltd. This shows the detail of the design, including the winged horseshoe and the arms of Liverpool in enamel, which indicate the character of the trophy and the locale of the race. The whole is richly gilt.

firmness which makes them practical wear for everyone, and imparts a touch of dignity even to a tub frock.

"SAUNDEVAN."

"Saundevan" was used during the war on H.M.S. Vindictive at Zeebrugge, the clothes of the men in charge of the flame-thrower being treated with it, and in the trenches for the woodwork of "dug-outs" and buildings as a protection against the German flamewerfers; aviation suits for pilots and observers were also of fabric treated with "Saundevan." If two curtains hanging side by side are soaked with petrol, the one having first been treated with "Saundevan," and set on fire, the treated one will be found untouched, the other consumed to a cinder. Messrs. Shinelite, Limited, of 2, Southampton Street, Strand, have been appointed sole selling agents for "Saundevan."

UNCRUSHABLE LINENS FOR SUMMER WEAR.

It is not by any means too early to begin the serious consideration of summer frocks, and the woman who is wise will write at once for patterns of their new uncrushable linens to Messrs. Hutton, Larne, Ireland. They are made of pure flax in no fewer than sixty-three shades, which are all guaranteed absolutely fadeless and, 36ins. wide, cost only 3s. 3d. a yard. Every woman knows the disappointment of finding a pretty frock of zephyr, organdie—what you will—put gaily on for a day on the river or a tennis tournament, a hopeless, crushed and dragged affair after a few hours' wear; and these uncrushable linens will be found a most desirable alternative. They have a slight

FOR THE CROWN PRINCE OF JAPAN.

It is indeed a pleasant commentary on the recognised value of British goods that, on the occasion of the marriage of H.I.H. the Crown Prince of Japan, many articles for presentation were ordered in London. Among these were two exquisite travelling cases fashioned by Messrs. Mappin and Webb, Limited, 2, Queen Victoria Street, E.C., who are specially appointed jewellers, silversmiths, etc., to the Japanese Imperial Household. The Prince's case, which we illustrate, was in crocodile-skin, that of the Princess in pigskin; both had plain 18-carat gold fittings with the Imperial crest raised in platinum.

EXCELLENT FOR THE TEETH.

Wright's Coal Tar Soap has been the delight of mothers and nurses and of all the delicate-skinned tribe who must use only the purest and most antiseptic of soap, for many years past. To them, no word beyond the one word "Wright's" will be necessary to recommend Wright's Coal Tar Dentifrice. This is a fine powder, the friction of powder being invaluable in removing filmy deposits from the teeth and making them white and well polished looking, and is made up from a formula which, while agreeable to use, neutralises the processes of fermentation and decay in the mouth. It is packed in neat boxes, and a special transparent cover prevents the powder from falling out in the usual annoying fashion when the box is opened.
